

BIG ATLANTIC LINERS NOT RACE, BUT—

Nieuw Amsterdam and Vaderland Simply Happened to Start About Same Time, and of Course the German Wouldn't Let Any Dutchman Beat Him Across.

NEW YORK, April 27.—"No, there was no race, but we saw the Vaderland, and our boat being the best, why, we were first to reach the Hook. But we did not race. That is against the rules of the line."—Captain of the Nieuw Amsterdam.

"Why should we race? We ran our ordinary trip and would have been first in port if the Nieuw Amsterdam had not crowded toward the northerly or short course. But it was no race."—Captain of the Vaderland.

Two giant liners were in sight of each other nearly all the way across the Atlantic. Their passengers landed today, filled with stories of an exciting ocean race in which stokers worked over the fires until they fell exhausted, and of engines worked to the last ounce of speed that was in them. But neither liner would officially admit that there had been a speed contest. Yet there is joyousness on the Nieuw Amsterdam and corresponding gloom on the Vaderland.

When morning broke on April 18 both vessels were just clearing the English channel, with the Nieuw Amsterdam five miles astern. The latter had left Rotterdam and Boulogne the night before at about the same hour that the Vaderland left Antwerp and Dover. Both started to crowd their boilers a little, and the pace was hit up until on Wednesday morning, the 21st, the vessels were abreast, with the Holland-American boat about four miles to the north.

Roth vessels saluted with their sirens, colors were dipped, and then the engine forces got busy. The Nieuw Amsterdam hauled to the north, heading for the shorter course, as a gale began to kick up waves. The weather became very rough on the 22d and 23d, but the big Dutchman kept her head toward the north, with the result that she was abreast of the Ambrose channel light this morning. One hour and fifty minutes later the Vaderland came in.

REIGN OF CRIME LAID TO SUSPECT

Woman's Revelations Startle Dayton—Officials Clash Over Case.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 27.—The State fire marshal's department and the Dayton police are at odds regarding Elmer Carr, whom the fire marshals are trying to implicate in the series of woman murders that recently shocked Dayton.

State Fire Marshal W. S. Rodgers today issued a voluminous statement containing the sworn testimony of Mrs. Carrie M. Middlestetter, of Dayton, which points to Carr as the perpetrator of at least two of these crimes. Carr is now under arrest at Dayton charged with arson. The Dayton police say that this is the only charge that can be brought against him. Rodgers and his deputies declare that the police are only trying to cover up their own failure to discover the murderer.

Lived With Woman.

Rodgers says that Carr lived at the Middlestetter home in Dayton and had the woman under such terror that he did not hesitate to reveal to her his deeds. After Carr's arrest, Rodgers says, Mrs. Middlestetter told him Carr had engaged upon a "satanic crime."

She says he kept a set of disguises at the house, and went forth at night. Lizzie Fulhart was attacked and murdered at Dayton January 31. Mary Forchir was murdered there January 23. Mrs. Middlestetter, according to Rodgers, says that Carr left her house on the night of January 23 in one of his disguises. He returned at 11 o'clock, saturated his outer clothing and disguises with kerosene, and burned them. On the night of January 31, she says in the affidavit, he had eighteen-year-old Lizzie Fulhart in her boarding house. He left with her at midnight. The following day, she says, he had Mrs. Middlestetter accompany him to an abandoned mansion. There he pointed significantly to a cistern in the back yard, and told her it would some day tell a tale.

In His Power.

Carr was arrested as a suspect in the Fulhart case, and was held. After his arrest he was word to Mrs. Middlestetter, says Rodgers, telling her to hide the girl's hat, which had been left at her house. This she promptly did, according to Rodgers.

Mrs. Middlestetter, says the marshal, was completely in Carr's power. He had threatened her with death if she told what she knew.

MAJOR JUDSON BACK FROM NEW ENGLAND

Will Embody Several Ideas Gained in Plans for District Reformatory.

Commissioner Judson returned today from an inspection of the reformatory at Bridgewater, Sherborn and Concord, Mass.

Major Judson said he was much impressed with the way in which Massachusetts cared for its convicts and will embody the erection and control of the new District reformatory and workhouse. The Commissioner inspected also several of the school buildings of Boston.

Accompanied by Justice Wendell Philip Stafford and John Joy Edson, members of the commission in charge of the preparation of plans for the new District institutions, Major Judson will visit several of the sites offered in Virginia the first of next week.

BLISS IS INDICTED ON LARCENY CHARGE

Is Man Who Was Tarr'd and Feathered Last July.

Francis E. Bliss, of the Bliss & Albrecht firm of Baltimore, was indicted today by the grand jury on the charge of embezzlement.

Bliss has disappeared from Washington. The case against him involves alleged misappropriation of funds of the firm of which he is a member and whose representative he was in Washington.

Given Coat of Tar.

Bliss figured in a sensational case here last July when he was tarred and feathered at the home of Charles Martinson in Kenyon street. Bliss called at the latter's home to call upon a woman who, it was afterward said, was Mrs. Martinson.

Partner Brings Charge.

Mr. Albrecht, the other member of the firm, came over from Baltimore and began an investigation of the affairs in the local office, which disclosed the fact that there was a shortage in the accounts. The police were notified, and the indictment returned this morning was the result. The whereabouts of Bliss is unknown.

Frank D. Elder and his wife, Adreana Pearl Elder, were indicted by the grand jury charged with grand larceny. Elder and his wife are charged with having stolen goods from a family by the name of Carpenter while boarding with the latter at their home near Fourteenth and East Capitol streets.

D. Augustus Wright was indicted on the charge of having impersonated an officer of the General Land Office.

LEONARD CONTEST CLOSES ON FRIDAY

Answers to Question Received on That Day Will Be Considered.

The contest for a Leonard Porcelain-lined Refrigerator will end on Friday.

The refrigerator is the first prize for the best answer to the question, "Why Should Every Housewife Have a Leonard Refrigerator?" Answers received on Friday by the advertising department of Mayer & Co., 409 to 417 Seventh street, will be considered in awarding the prize. Contestants may submit as many answers as desired, each to be less than 100 words, however, and signed with name and address of writer.

The second prize will be an order for $5 on the purchase price of any porcelain-lined Leonard or Grand Rapids refrigerator. Fifty additional prizes of $1 discount on the price of a Leonard or Grand Rapids refrigerator, will also be awarded.

These refrigerators are lined entirely with white porcelain fused on to steel, and the purpose of the contest is to familiarize the public with this type of refrigerator and their claims for superiority. The names of winners will be printed in the Sunday afternoon issue of The Times.
